Residents young and old encouraged to get involved in #WFDigital month

November is officially about all things digital in Waltham Forest – and the Council hopes that residents of all ages will be scrolling, clicking and tapping at events and activities celebrating #WFDigital month.

The month-long event is not just about promoting digital-focused initiatives, but also about encouraging more people to get to grips with digital channels, particularly older residents.

Throughout November, the Council and Age UK Waltham Forest will offer people aged 60 and over opportunities to learn how to use Skype and take part in introductory workshops about how to use mobile phones.

There will also be competitions to win iPads, and plenty going on for younger people, including a free Minecraft-themed Coding Club Pattern Craft Workshop with Waltham Forest Libraries. British digital artist, Gemma May Latham, has developed code which allows users to design on the hugely popular video game Minecraft – and young residents can now learn this fantastic skill themselves.

Cllr Sharon Waldron, Cabinet Member for Digital and Customer Services, told Waltham Forest News: "The next few weeks promise to be really exciting for residents – whether they're digitally-savvy or wanting to better understand how to use a computer.

"We've got competitions, art displays, and a variety of educational and support workshops, all of which have a digital focus. I hope to see residents young and old taking part and getting behind #WFDigital."

Other initiatives include weekly drop-in sessions at libraries to help people wanting to sign up to My Account online, a Q&A session with Cllr Waldron on Facebook and free screenings of 'Parts and Labour' at the Empire Cinema, which explores the concept of animation as craft.

The Council is also training frontline staff to be 'Digital Champions' so they can help members of the public access online support. Digital Champions are on hand to assist anyone with activities such as setting up emails,

Library improvements

Residents are encouraged to give their views on libraries

You can tell the Council what you think about proposed improvements to Library Local branches in the borough by completing an online survey.

Under the current proposals, the Library Locals at Higham Hill and Wood Street would be relocated and remodelled, while the site at Lea Bridge would be refurbished. This is part of a vision for the facilities to match up to the best

■ Have your say about proposed library improvements

■ Council wants to create library service for whole community public libraries in London, and is all about making Library Locals even better, not reducing the number of libraries. All eight libraries will remain open, with all residents living within 1.5 miles of their nearest branch.

The Council is encouraging as many people as possible to fill in an online survey, including residents who don't normally use or visit Waltham Forest's libraries. This will ensure that planned future improvements help to create a library service for the whole community.

And if you don't have a computer at home, simply pop along to your nearest library and use one of the public computers to take part in the consultation.

The consultation on a vision for Library Locals, and what users would like to see in improved libraries, is open until Wednesday 30 November. In addition to the online survey, people can take part through focus groups, printed and on-street surveys, direct contact with protected groups and via social media.

In my opinion

Lakshmi Subramanian

Resident, Highams Park

In 2012 I signed up for a beginners' computer course being run by Age UK Waltham Forest. I saw the class advertised in Waltham Forest News, and it encouraged people aged 50 and over to find out more about using computers and the internet.

I knew that the world was becoming more computer-focused, and I wanted to learn how to use email and internet search engines to help me keep up.

The first session I joined was a ten-week beginners' course, which began with the very basics. Then, over the weeks, we moved on and learned how to 'surf' the Internet, use email, use search engines and tackle basic word processing tasks, such as writing letters.

Each session lasted two hours, and the classes were kept to a small size. This meant that the trainers could give everyone the individual attention they needed, as everyone learned things at different rates.

The course cost £39.90 for the entire ten weeks, which I think offered great value for money. The sessions took place at Age UK's Resource Hub North (58 Hall Lane, E4 8EU).

I have now taken a number of different IT courses. One that I found particularly useful was called 'tips, tricks and favourite apps' which helped you use different applications on your smartphone.

My next task is to convert old vinyl records into a digital format so that I can transfer them to an MP3 player or smartphone. I am a big jazz music fan, and want to enjoy listening to my old records again.

I will be 80 in February, and I feel it's never too late to learn. It's important to know what's happening in the world and try something new every week.

The social aspect of the classes is also great; as it helps you meet more people from your area.

There is also no need to be shy, as everyone is in the same boat and is there to learn something they don't currently know.

I used to feel slightly threatened by computers, but there really is nothing to be scared of. I want to encourage older people who are nervous about using computers to get in touch with Age UK Waltham Forest to find out more about their beginner's courses. They are good value for money, help keep you up to date with modern technology and give another way for you to keep active in the community. There really is nothing to lose!

Carers step up for refugees

Fifteen asylum-seeking children who arrived in the UK from the Calais refugee camp have been placed with loving families by Waltham Forest Council over the past two weeks.

The Council is taking the opportunity to pay thanks to the borough's fabulous foster carers for stepping up and offering safety, support and comfort to young people left feeling scared and alone after fleeing violence in their country.

Council Leader, Chris Robbins, said: "Waltham Forest's foster carers have been absolutely magnificent.

"Five of our carers went so far as to volunteer to accept emergency placements from some of the coaches arriving last weekend, which carried some children judged too vulnerable to be temporarily placed in central reception centres. The foster carers had no prior information about the children and in most cases could not speak the same language.

"Our fantastic foster carers have really come through for these young people, and as a result the children we've placed with carers have said they felt welcomed and were relieved to be in a family home after months of being afraid and lonely."

Included in the placements were three children who the Council was able to reunite with family members already living in the borough. Social workers are currently assessing what further support they will need going forward.

With more children continuing to arrive in the UK from Calais, the Council is letting residents know that it desperately needs more foster carers. To become a Waltham Forest foster carer you must have room in your heart and a spare room in your home.

Carers have 24/7 access to social worker support, extensive training and a rewards package that includes a professional fee and up to 60 per cent off Council Tax.

In brief

Remembrance Day and Armistice Day

Ceremonies to commemorate those who have served in the armed forces will take place on Sunday 13 November. Residents are invited to join the Council at events across the borough, organised by the Royal British Legion, to remember all those who lost their lives in conflict. In Chingford, a parade will gather at Chingford Fire Station (34 The Ridgeway, E4 6PP) from 10am followed by a service and wreath-laying at the war memorial near King's Head Hill. In Leyton, residents can meet at 9.30am at Coronation Gardens (Buckingham Road, E10 5NG) to lay wreaths, before proceeding to St Mary's Parish Church (Church Road, E10 5JP) for a service at 10.30am. In Leytonstone, a service will start at 10.30am at the Harrow Green Memorial (High Road Leytonstone, E11 4JU). And in Walthamstow, a parade will meet at the William Morris Gallery (Forest Road, E17 4PP) at 10am before moving to the Town Hall (Forest Road, E17 4JF) for the Civic Service of Remembrance, which begins at 10.40am. The Council will also observe Armistice Day with a two minute silence at 11am on Friday 11 November. Residents are invited to join councillors and council officers at the flagpole at the Town Hall at 10.50am for a short ceremony.

New workspace initiative

Council Leader, Chris Robbins, and Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan MP, met business owners at Central Parade, Walthamstow

Over 130 creative businesses are set to benefit from a new £2.2m workspace initiative, which was announced by the Council last week during a visit to the borough from the Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan.

The scheme is designed to appeal to the digital, media and creative companies that are already moving to Waltham Forest, attracted by our excellent transport links and vibrant local community. It has been backed by a £1.1million grant from the London Regeneration Fund, which is being match-funded by the Council with investment from a variety of sources.

At least three new workspaces for 65 businesses will be created by March 2019, including Council-owned sites on Lockwood Way in Blackhorse Lane, Walthamstow. As well as offering modern and flexible workspace, the scheme will support more than 130 businesses and create 30 new jobs and apprenticeships.

Council Leader, Chris Robbins, said: "Providing the vital support to help new business grow in the borough will also help to boost our local economy and provide a range of new skills and employment opportunities for our residents."

The Workspace Initiative will build on the success of Central Parade in Walthamstow, a Council-owned building which was re-opened earlier this year as a creative hub for local businesses, thanks to funding from the Mayor of London. During his visit to the borough the Mayor visited Central Parade and met with a number of business owners who have taken residence there.

Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, said: Coming to Waltham Forest today has reminded me not only of the entrepreneurship in this borough, but the values it stands for as a place that is open and inviting. There's a real buzz about this place and by regenerating the area, the Council is helping people fulfil their potential. It's an exciting Council doing dynamic things."

During the visit the Council also launched its new Economic Growth Strategy – a four year masterplan for delivering new housing, investing in town centres, supporting local businesses and providing employment and skills opportunities for local people.

Support at your fingertips

The Council wants to help everyone living and working in the borough to enjoy a good quality of life. In this special digital-themed edition of Waltham Forest News, we're looking at the information and advice available to families online which aims to support parents and children in all aspects of their lives

The online Children and Young People's Directory offers families advice on all services and activities available for young people in Waltham Forest. The Local Offer is a guide to services for those with special educational needs and disabilities

Waltham Forest's online Children and Young People's Directory is the go-to resource for local families looking for the services they need most – whether it be new parents looking for childcare options, individuals seeking learning and employment opportunities or general family support services.

Parents or carers of children with special educational needs or disabilities (SEND) in Waltham Forest can also go online to find The Local Offer – a guide to all the services for young people with SEND aged from birth to 25 years. In addition, visitors to these web pages will also be able to find a varied events and activities calendar to help keep children and young people entertained outside of school hours.

Online Directory

The borough's Children and Young People's Directory has been designed to contain everything families in Waltham Forest might need to know about the support and services available to help them thrive.

This includes resources like free childcare information videos, which help viewers find out more about the Free Early Education Entitlement and how it works in different kinds of childcare settings.

Visitors to the Directory web pages will also be able to find everything they need to know about the Council's Children and Family Centres, which offer services, activities and support for families with children aged under five. They are open to all and no appointment is needed, so families can just come along.

Most activities at the centres are offered free but a few involve a small cost. Activities offer the opportunity to connect with other parents and make new friends – and there are also things like health, jobs, careers and training advice services available.

The Local Offer

The Local Offer is Waltham Forest's complete guide to all services available for children and young people with special educational needs and disabilities (SEND), and their parents/carers.

It has been produced to ensure key topics are covered such as education, health and care plan pathways and SEND transport options. There is also a range of useful tools to help users find exactly what they need including video content, interactive websites and a dedicated speech tool which can read information aloud without the need for additional software.

Available services and support are listed under different age categories: 0-5, 5-11, 11-19 and 19-25, to make it as easy as possible for parents and carers to find the information relevant to them and their children.

The Council hopes users find the website to be a dynamic resource for families and providers alike, which is engaging and a real asset to families with children with SEND.

Improving access

The Council wants to ensure families and individuals across the borough can get online should they want or need to. That is why free internet access is available at all of the borough's libraries.

However, we understand that not everyone is confident when it comes to using a computer and browsing the internet. There will always be some people who cannot; for all sorts of reasons, use digital services – and it is thought about seven per cent of the borough's population will need some sort of assistance in one way or another.

To address this, the Council is training frontline customer service staff to be 'Digital Champions' to help members of the public access online support.

Digital Champions are on hand to assist anyone with activities such as setting up emails, using the Council's website, registering for MyAccount, paying bills, applying for services online or signposting residents to relevant training. Look out for more information on Digital Champions in the next edition of Waltham Forest News, which will be published on Monday 21 November.

DriveNow car club offers 300 cars for hire

DriveNow app

Since launching in Waltham Forest last year, the DriveNow car club has made it easy for residents to find and book a car when they need it, thanks to the scheme's clever smartphone app. DriveNow has 300 cars operating in the boroughs of Hackney, Haringey, Islington and Waltham Forest. To hire a car just download the DriveNow app, pay a one-off joining fee of £29 and use the app to find where the nearest available vehicle is parked. You'll receive a code to unlock the car, and rental rates start at just 29 pence per mile. And the app offers other useful tools; you can store your favourite destinations so they're always at hand, and a filtering tool allows you to choose the make of car you'd like. For example, parents might like to stick to the BMW 1 series, as they come equipped with a child booster seat, while the electric-powered BMW i3 can be taken into the central London Congestion Zone free of charge. DriveNow also has the unique feature of allowing drivers to leave the vehicles anywhere in the four boroughs after they are finished using them – you don't even need to use a dedicated DriveNow parking space.

Enviro-heroes assemble

Are you interested in volunteering but unsure how to get started? Then visit the new Enviro-heroes website where you can find details of lots of volunteering opportunities across the borough and how to get involved. Enviro-heroes is a new initiative that aims to bring together all the local volunteer-led initiatives that help to make our borough a cleaner, tidier and more attractive place to live. The volunteering opportunities available are not just confined to the summer months – you could become a Snow Angel and help to keep your local pavements and paths safe if they get covered in ice and snow this winter.

It's easy to book a large item collection online, so there's no excuse to dump unwanted items

Click for collection

- Large item collections are easy to arrange on the Council website
- Additional services available for residents, landlords and businesses

Do you have any unwanted items around your home that are gathering dust and taking up valuable space? If the answer is yes, did you know you can arrange to have them collected in just a few clicks or swipes on the Council website?

The Council offers a free large item collection service for residents, and you can have up to five items collected each time. This is ideal if you have an unwanted wardrobe, mattress or sofa that you need to dispose of. Just log into your My Account on the Council website and check if your item is eligible for collection, then choose from the next two available collection dates.

You can also add more items to your free collection up to 24 hours beforehand (as long as your free collection does not exceed five items), and change or cancel your collection date if you need to, all via the Council website.

Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for Environment said: "With our large item collection service it's never been easier to dispose of your unwanted household items quickly and easily. Simply visit our website and choose the option that suits you – if your item is in good condition you can even donate it for reuse or recycling to give it a new lease of life."

When you book a large item collection the website will give you an option to donate your item to a local reuse or recycling service, as long as it is an item that is suitable to be reused and in good condition.

All waste electrical items that require a plug or battery can be reused or recycled, so the Council is no longer accepting these as part of large item collections. If you have an electrical item you no longer need you can arrange to have it collected for reuse, or take it to a recycling bank or household waste recycling centre. You can find your nearest recycling point on the Council website.

If you have more than five items to be collected or you need them picked up in a hurry then the Council also offers an upgraded collection service, which can also be booked online. For just £25 you can have up to 20 items collected in one go, with access to earlier collection dates (subject to availability). The upgraded service will also pick up some items which are not eligible for the free collection – a full list is available on the website.

The Council also now offers a white goods collection service, which is perfect if you have bulky electrical items like fridges, washing machines or dishwashers that you need to get rid of. This service is available to residents and private landlords who may need to have items removed from their rented properties. Collections can be booked online and prices start at just £25.

Landlords and businesses can also take advantage of the Council's commercial large item collection service. This allows for the removal of up to 20 items, with prices starting at £60. Again (you guessed it!) these collections can all be booked online. If landlords or business have special requirements that are not covered by the standard collections, such as a large number of items or a house clearance, they can email largeitemcollections@walthamforest.gov.uk.

Reporting it online

- Tablet computers help Council officers deal with enviro-crime on the go
- Report issues on the Council website using your My Account

Neighbourhoods officers use tablet computers to respond to issues on the move

Keeping your streets clean and tackling enviro-crimes such as littering and fly-tipping are top priorities for the Council, and you can help by reporting any issues online so we can get them sorted and track down the culprits.

Every ward in the borough has a dedicated Neighbourhoods officer to help us work closely with residents and deal with the local issues that matter most to you. Earlier this year all of our Neighbourhoods officers were provided with tablet computers to help them report and respond to issues while they are on the move.

Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for Environment said: "By equipping our Neighbourhoods officers with tablets we are making use of technology to provide a more responsive local service for residents. Littering and fly-tipping will not be tolerated in this borough and we are coming down hard on the enviro-criminals with fines and prosecutions. I urge residents to keep reporting online any enviro-crimes they witness so we can take action swiftly."

Neighbourhoods officers use their tablets to report issues they see while they patrol around the borough, such as fly-tipping and littering. Problems raised by residents can also be sent directly to Neighbourhoods officers, so they can investigate while they are on the move. By using new technology in this way officers can spend less time in the office and more time on the streets speaking to residents and dealing with local issues.

Residents can report all types of enviro-crimes such as fly-tipping and dog fouling quickly and easily online via the Council website. Once you have signed in with your My Account you can pin-point the exact location where the offence has taken place and even upload photos to help officers find it easily.

The Council has pledged to wage war on enviro-crime by not only clearing the mess, but also tracking down and punishing those responsible. It is already making good use of new powers that allow local authorities to issue £400 fixed penalty notices (FPNs) to people caught fly-tipping, meaning residents aren't left footing the bill for cleaning them up. Since July the Council has issued 88 FPNs for flytipping, which means fines in excess of £30,000 have been dished out so far. It has also initiated a number of prosecutions for non-payment of fines.

Leyton

Cllr Clare Coghill, Cabinet Member for Economic Growth and High Streets, was on hand last month as Eric Sarpong, a Partner from John Lewis Stratford, presented a cheque to Leyton Gurdwara and some of the digital learners

Leyton Gurdwara goes digital

- Older members of Leyton Gurdwara learn to use digital devices
- Free classes are supported by the Adult Learning Service

If you've never used a computer or any other kind of digital device before, you might want to take inspiration from older residents who attend Leyton Gurdwara (Sikh temple). Thanks to a partnership between Waltham Forest Council's Adult Learning Service (ALS) and volunteers from the temple, several members have learnt IT skills for the first time.

The project began when local resident, Inderjeet Plaha, contacted the ALS to enquire about running computer workshops for older people.

Inderjeet told Waltham Forest News: "I was a teacher for more than 25 years, and after I left my last school I started volunteering. I wanted to help people enjoy lifelong learning, and keep myself active at the same time.

"All Sikhs are encouraged to do 'seva'; which is selfless service to others. It is good for bringing the community together, and it improves your own wellbeing. We had an empty room at the Gurdwara, and I realised that it would be a great space to use for adult learning projects, especially among older members."

As the Gurdwara could provide a room, the Council was able to support the learners by providing a tutor to run a weekly workshop, which takes place every Tuesday, between 10am and 12noon. It is free to attend.

The project has flourished, thanks to dedicated volunteers and the enthusiasm of the learners, with more than 40 people signing up this academic year. The ALS has also assisted by providing old, unwanted computers that were nearing the end of their useable life.

Since the sessions began, participants have learnt everything from using Google to search for information, booking holidays, shopping, checking bus timetables and even downloading shabads (hymns).

Inderjeet added: "I am so proud of all the learners, and everything they have achieved so far. With encouragement from friends and family they have developed the confidence to go on to learn how to use the internet and smartphones so that they are better able to access public services."

Balbir Matharu told Waltham Forest News: "I have been attending for around six months, and have learnt to email, send pictures and use a smartphone. We have learnt a little at a time, and there was nothing to be nervous about, as our tutor was so good at explaining things."

Sonya Kalsi, a college student who was attending the Gurdwara with her grandmother, Balbir, said: "I think the classes have been great, and they've encouraged people like my grandmother to become more independent.

"She lives on her own, and I was worried that she sometimes didn't know how to find information about things and was missing out.

"I think younger people sometimes forget that we've grown up with technology, and what seems completely normal to us can be confusing to someone who has never used digital devices. If you can sit down and teach someone in your family how to use a tablet or smartphone, you're helping them stay independent."

And there is more good news, as John Lewis Stratford is set to donate £900 of laptop computers, thanks to its Community Matters scheme.

Every three months each John Lewis store selects three community groups to help; with customers voting for the organisation they'd like to support.

John Lewis Stratford's Head of Branch, Ruth Scharvona, said: "Being able to support this project was very rewarding and John Lewis Stratford is looking forward to a continued relationship with the Gurdwara.

"The John Lewis Partnership has a commitment to supporting local communities and having Partners from our branch visit the temple is a fantastic opportunity to put this into practice."

Award assessor, Roisin Kushoror, presents the E-Safety Award certificate to Downsell Primary's ICT Leader, Monwara Rahman

Downsell's E-Safety Award

Parents of pupils at Downsell Primary School (Downsell Road, E15 2BS) will be happy to hear that the school has received an award for its efforts to keep youngsters, staff and parents safe online. The school was presented with the 360° E-Safety Award in September, after assessors visited to conduct a day-long inspection. Run by the South West Grid for Learning, a not-for-profit charitable trust that provides a range of services designed specifically for education, the E-Safety Award encourages schools to integrate online safety into school policy and the curriculum, challenging teachers and managers to think about its continual evolution. The school completes an online self-review and is then inspected by an independent assessor. The school's e-safety lead, Monwara Rahman, was praised by assessors for her dedication to improving pupils' online safety.

Stay safe online

Secondary school and college students are being taught about staying safe online

■ Council project protects school community from dangers online

■ Free package of support available to all secondaries and colleges

Young people in Waltham Forest are being taught how to protect themselves against potentially harmful information or views being presented online, as part of a school-based 'Digital Resilience' support project.

The Council-funded project, which is free for secondary school and college staff and students in the borough, aims to build resilience so that no-one becomes vulnerable to radicalisation.

Digital Resilience coordinators believe that if young people can develop a critical mind-set when accessing information in an increasingly digital world, they dramatically reduce their vulnerability to potentially harmful information and agendas, which can be presented in a very persuasive, yet misleading, manner.

The approach is part of the Council's Prevent programme of work, which aims to stop people from supporting terrorism or becoming terrorists.

The Digital Resilience project includes lesson plans and classroom activities, multi-media education sessions, guest speakers, opportunities to take part in youth-led projects, governor and parent engagement and staff training. It can be delivered by individual schools or by the borough's dedicated Prevent schools officer.

Sessions run as part of the Digital Resilience project allow staff and students to discuss topics such as 'what is radicalisation' in a safe environment, with experts who can offer insight and reassurance to everyone involved.

The project has been designed with input from school staff, who were keen to ensure it was framed in the wider safeguarding work schools carry out. This approach ensures staff are well placed to support young people in becoming more careful and discerning users of the internet and social networking sites such as Twitter, Facebook and YouTube. We know from student focus groups that more than 60 per cent rated YouTube as their first port of call for reliable information.

All of this work has been approved by a local panel of independent professionals and community members working in education and for the Council.

Cllr Liaquat Ali MBE JP, Cabinet Member for Community Safety and Cohesion, said: "We have seen first-hand the important role that Prevent has played in ensuring the safety and resilience of all members of the school community in Waltham Forest.

"Our Digital Resilience project has really helped to improve knowledge and understanding of the risks we face, and has served to reassure residents that the borough's Community Safety team is committed to doing all it can to protect the local area."

For young people and parents, there has been an increasing demand for information and guidance on how best to approach internet dos and don'ts given the potential dangers that users have to navigate.

In response, the Council's Digital Resilience coordinators have ensured that parts of the programme cover social networks, learning how to check online sources of information and e-Propaganda – as well as online parenting programmes in various languages.

This helps to ensure the families and younger generations in the borough are able to make safe and sensible choices about how they interact with the vast and influential digital and online community.

Cllr Ali continued: "One thing has been apparent throughout all of the work that has taken place as part of this Digital Resilience project; professionals, parents, community leaders and young people all recognise the need to support one another to build a sense of community and belonging, and to safeguard against the risks that exist for most of us in modern society.

"This package has helped so many of our residents to do just that, and will continue to do so."

Top online safety tips

- Never post personal information online. Don't give out your name, address, phone number, school or age.
- Don't become friends with people you don't know, or agree to meet up with strangers – not everyone online is who they say they are.
- Remember that not everything you see on YouTube, or other online sites, is factual.
- If you come across something online that worries you, end your online session and tell someone you trust straight away.

In brief

Online shopping advice

One of the busiest shopping days of the year – 'Black Friday' – takes place on Friday 25 November, and many of us will be heading online to avoid the crowds and grab ourselves a bargain. However, you should always check you are buying from a legitimate website, especially if the price looks too good to be true. When buying online you should only use reputable sites, and never reply to unsolicited emails from companies you don't recognise. Paying by credit card offers greater protection if there turns out to be a problem with your purchase, as the Consumer Credit Act 1974 states your credit provider must take the same responsibility a retailer does if something goes wrong with your purchase. However, this only applies to purchases of between £100 and £30,000. There are also some other exceptions, so always double check before making a purchase online. You should also check that a website is secure before entering your payment details. A website that has been encrypted offers additional safety – look out for padlock or unbroken key icons at the top or bottom of your internet browser as a sign that encryption is being used.

Waltham Forest

Credit Union goes online

Residents looking to set aside money for Christmas will be pleased to hear that it's now even easier to open an online savings account, thanks to the Walthamstow-based East London Credit Union (ELCU).

Last year, Waltham Forest Council funded ELCU to the tune of £500,000; part of which was invested in financial technology (Fin Tech) to give members easy online access to their loans and savings accounts and encourage more residents to open an account.

ELCU become the first fully-automated credit union in England earlier this year and now offers members 24/7 online access to their accounts. New customers can also apply online.

The ELCU (72-74 High Street, E17 7LD) is a financial cooperative, open to anyone who lives, works or studies in Waltham Forest. They offer a savings account where you can pay in as much as you like, from £1 upwards. Savers even receive a portion of the union's profits each year – known as a dividend.

Your savings can help other residents access affordable loans for anything from repairing the washing machine to making home improvements. As any surplus the ELCU makes is passed back to members, it's a no-cost way of giving something back to your community.

Members can also access loans of between £7,000 and £15,000 with interest rates as low as 4.3 per cent – a rate that compares favourably with high street banks.

Anyone is welcome to join the ELCU, whether you're on a low income or are a higher wage earner.

Last year adult members received a one per cent dividend, while children received three per cent.

The East London Credit Union shop is open Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 9.30am to 4.30pm. You can also drop in on Saturdays between 10am and 2pm. Online banking services are available 24/7.

Perfect pressies online

You can buy gifts, art and much more from the William Morris Gallery's online shop

Did you know you can grab a gift from the William Morris Gallery's online shop? And were you aware you can order high quality prints from Vestry House Museum's photo archive over the internet?

It's easy to do either – and all proceeds from sales are reinvested into the Museum and Gallery's programme of exhibitions, events and educational projects.

The online William Morris Gallery

shop boasts a range of products featuring Morris's best-loved patterns, alongside beautiful designs by his associates such as John Henry Dearle, Charles Voysey and Walter Crane.

Gifts, accessories, homeware, stationery and books are all available – and there's even a Christmas shop section.

However, if you prefer a more old-fashioned approach, and want to visit the shop in person, why not pay a visit on Friday 25 November, when the gallery (Forest Road, E17 4PP) hosts a Christmas Night Market?

The event will feature more than 20 stalls run by members of the E17 Designers, a collective of designer makers based in Walthamstow. Products available on the night will include ceramics, illustrations and prints, jewellery, screen printed t-shirts and knitwear.

Taking place from 6.30pm until 10pm, visitors are asked to make a £1 donation on the door.

The photo archive at Vestry House Museum (Vestry Road, E17 9NH), which documents the history of Waltham Forest, was published online for the first time last year.

Going back to the 1840s and covering Chingford, Leyton, Leytonstone and Walthamstow, it contains hundreds of historic images of the borough's streets and buildings – including landmark churches, shops and pubs – as well as portraits of local personalities and community celebrations. The images can be searched by date, area or theme and purchased as high-quality giclée prints in a variety of sizes.

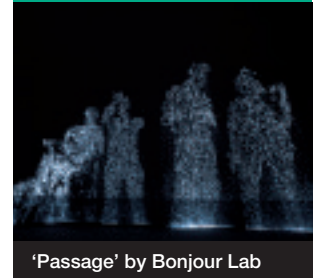

Council Leader, Chris Robbins, told Waltham Forest News: "From the comfort of your own home it's easy to get hold of a Morris-inspired gift or a unique and personal print from Vestry House Museum – either of which would make a perfect Christmas present for friends and family.

"And the best thing is that all proceeds from sales are reinvested into the Gallery and Museum – helping preserve our heritage for future generations."

Shop online

See for yourself what's on sale at the William Morris Gallery's online shop by visiting www.wmgallery.org.uk/shop. The Vestry House Museum photo archive can be accessed at <http://boroughphotos.org/walthamforest> and prints start at £8.75.

Walthamstow Town Centre Improvements

As Waltham Forest continues to grow, we are working hard to ensure that the transport network in the town centre can support growth and that everyone can get around easily.

In the short term, we are working closely with Transport for London to transform the 'Walthamstow gyratory' (the area on Hoe Street and Selborne Road around Walthamstow Central tube station), to make the town centre a more pleasant, accessible and safer area for all road users.

From 1 November to the end of December 2016 minor works will take place to improve the bus station exit and the main gyratory area. Both Hoe Street and Selborne Road will be open as usual, however during the works lanes will be rearranged and traffic management signs and cones will be in place to direct traffic and keep vehicles moving. Although roads remain open we do expect disruption, and journeys to take longer than usual.

Residents will have the opportunity to shape the long term plans for the area when consultation takes place early in 2017.

The longer term proposals will include a new public space in the heart of the town and introduce a simplified traffic layout, better access to public transport, provide space for cycling and improve pedestrian crossings. The main work on the new bridge will take place from January to Summer 2017.

For information on the improvements and how your journey might be affected, please visit www.walthamforest.gov.uk/e17roadworks.
